ACCESSIBLE MOTORCYCLE

Mobility Works has won exclusive U.S. manufacturing and distribution rights to the innovative Martin Conquest wheelchair-accessible motorcycle. Martin Conquest, based in the United Kingdom, selected the company as its strategic partner in the U.S.; the motorcycle's manufacture will be centered in Akron, Ohio.

According to Bill Koebnitz, one of the founders of Mobility Works, "We are honored to be chosen to introduce the first production wheelchair-accessible motorcycle to the physically challenged community here in the United States."

Mobility Works's selection was based on its longstanding commitment to people with physical challenges. Mobility Conquest was founded to manufacture and distribute the motorcycles in the U.S.

Mark Allen Roberts, who will head Mobility Conquest, says, "We look forward to helping physically challenged members of our community reconnect with their passion for riding motorcycles. Statistically, 4% of the population ride motorcycles, and we are excited to provide our Conquest trike to help consumers with physical challenges from the waist down enjoy the ride again."

For wheelchair users, riding a motorcycle has often been just a fantasy. The few motorcycles that were produced were custom affairs, available only to those with connections or sufficient funding. With more than 300 inquiries concerning the Martin Conquest in the first three months, the demand is expected to be quite high for this wheelchair-accessible motorbike.

Mobility Conquest offers access to some of the most powerful, high-performance road machines anywhere, designed by and for consumers in wheelchairs. The heart of the vehicle is the front end and engine of a BMW R 1170.

At a glance, the bike offers a 0-60 speed of just 7.6 seconds (with wheelchair adaptation), 15-second quarter-mile time, and a top speed of 105 mph.

Making fantasy a reality, the Conquest wheelchair-accessible motorcycle offers a 0-60 speed in just 7.6 seconds, a 15-second quarter-mile time, and a top speed of 105 mph.

"I am having so much fun on my bike. Me and my brother get to ride bikes almost every day. My Mom sometimes cries when I am on my bike, but she says it's just because she is so happy. My Dad says that's what being a kid is all about."

Maximum output is 109 bph, thanks to the 1170-cc engine.

However, the real story is the adaptive chassis. Drivers will board the bike via a remote-controlled raising and lowering ramp at the rear. The chassis reportedly provides tremendous stability, as well—transforming the bike into a trike. The Conquest also features six forward gears, full reverse, and an electronic parking brake.

Safety features for drivers include a wheelchair locking system, which has a push-button release, as well as hydraulic front and rear racing disc brakes, operated from a single lever. The clutch is thumb-controlled, thanks to a two-button Klicktronic system for semi-automatic operation.

The Martin Conquest reportedly complies with all U.S. federal laws and guidelines for handicap-accessible vehicles.
